

PERMANENT LINER

MAKEUP

Permanent liner permanent makeup technique is performed by placing pigment between epidermis and dermis with the use of a permanent makeup tattoo machine. It is a form of cosmetic tattooing. The permanentmakeup artist will use topical anesthetic to limit discomfort.

Durability: permanent liner is a tattoo. The tattoo, as all other tattoos, can fade depending on multiple factors (quality of pigment/ink used, UV exposure, use of in skincare products, medications). Tattooing is permanent, whether it is on the body or face. Immediately post treatment, liner will appear darker than expected, but will fade during the healing process over the following 4 weeks.

The treatment is typically a 2 step application process:

- The initial appointment includes consultation and initial application.
- The second appointment or so called touch up session a minimum of 4 weeks later is to refine the shape and fine-tune color.

Permanent makeup eyeliner:

It's a thin line between your upper lashes. Creates an illusion of fuller lashes, "opens" your eyes.

Each procedure takes from one to 3 hours, requires at least one touch up. The color of the pigment used is custom and selected by a technician to compliment an individual's complexion without looking "overdone" or fake. Permanent makeup appears 50% to 30% brighter right after the procedure, it takes about 4 weeks for the tattooed area to heal.
